Websites/resources for Sustainability at Community Colleges

www.aashe.org This is the Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education which contains an enormous amount of material broken down into categories like purchasing, curriculum, etc. Lots of syllabi can also be found here. Institutional memberships are required to access many of the resources in the Resource Center and I think the value of the site is well worth the price of membership. A blog can be found at <http://www.aashe.org/staffblog>

<http://blogs.wsj.com/environmentalcapital/> is the green business blog of the Wall Street Journal. Given the growth in green jobs and alternative energy, this is an even-handed source that can help community colleges keep their fingers on the pulse of what is coming.

<http://www.secondnature.org> contains resources dealing with higher education.

<http://www.presidentsclimatecommitment.org/> is the website of the American College and University Presidents Climate Commitment.

<http://www.ncwe.org/documents/GoingGreen.pdf> is the online report recently produced by the National Council for Workforce Education dealing with community colleges and green workforce training. Multiple lists of resources appear at the end of the report.

Finally, the community college sustainability phone call takes place monthly and is coordinated by Jennifer Hayward at Lane CC. Email haywardj@lanecc.edu for more info. The next call takes place March 5th and info appears below: Our next conference call will be tomorrow, Thursday, March 5 at 1:30 pm Eastern (10:30 am Pacific). Here is the call-in information: Conference dial-in number: (712) 775-7000 participant access code: 667911#
